Battle Royal

Held in Brooklyn (Attendance: 8,225)

SWAN SONG: "Backwood Hillbilly" Uncle Jethro and COT: Wonderful Wally Brown nabbed $1,000 and $1,100, respectively, when COT: The Don, Frank-O Valentine threw them onto the apron.
 COT: The Don, Frank-O Valentine won the GRL battle royal and the $40,000 prize.

(Backstage, "Lightning" Lance Brown is shown wearing his Southeast Championship, as he walks down a hall. He stops at a door and knocks. The door opens and it's none other than Wonderful Wally Brown.)

Lance Brown: I'm not here to talk about mom... Cassidy. This is about us dominating the GRL together. We'll discuss everything else off camera.

Wally Brown: You've got to admit that the "dirty beaver" chants are hilarious!

Lance Brown: Wally!

Wally Brown: Alright. Alright. What do you want to talk about?

Lance Brown: Your focus! You're so focused on Cassidy and you have NO championships to show for it. This is not what we had in mind. You don't even show up to the battle royal last cycle? Let me guess. You did it for me, huh? Don't answer that. You know what? We'll discuss this off camera.

(Lance walks off and Wally attempts to get him back for conversation.)

Wally Brown: Lance. Lance.
(The scene fades to black.)

[PROMO: “Family Therapy, GRL Style”]

(Scene opens to a stark, dusty office somewhere off the beaten path — a low-budget "Family Counseling Center." The furniture looks like it was donated by a retirement home. A faded diploma hangs crookedly on the wall. The camera cuts to Wonderful Wally Brown and Lightning Lance Brown sitting side-by-side on a ratty couch, arms folded, looking around impatiently.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

(gruffly)

"I don't even know why I'm doin' this, Lance. I'm not exactly what you'd call a 'people fixer.' I break people, that's my job. But you're my kid... and if you want this mess cleaned up, then damn it, I'll try."

Lightning Lance Brown:

(nodding earnestly)

"I just want us all to get along, Dad. Maybe... maybe we can help her. Maybe she can be the mom she used to be, you know?"

(Wally grumbles something under his breath but pats Lance on the back.)

(The camera cuts to the next room, where Cassidy—still a shadow of her former self—is sprawled lazily on a sagging recliner. Her bleached hair is tangled, and she nervously taps her fingernails against a can of cheap soda. Sitting next to her is her latest boy toy, Beaver, a skinny, rat-faced GRL hanger-on wearing a ripped "Beaver Cleaver" T-shirt and cargo shorts. He looks way too comfortable for someone who should be nervous.)

Therapist (off-screen voice):

"Alright... Cassidy, we're ready for you."

(Cassidy stumbles in, dragging Beaver with her. Wally's eyes narrow immediately, his body tensing like a coiled spring.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

(snarling)

"You bring him? To therapy?"

Cassidy:

(shrugging)

"He's my emotional support, Wally. You got your title belt, I got Beaver."

Beaver:

(grinning)

"Sup, Wally. Big fan, bro."

(Wally stands up slowly, towering over Beaver, the veins in his neck bulging.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

(growling)

"'Bro?' Let me tell you what's gonna happen, 'bro.' After this little talk, you're gonna get the kind of beating they write country songs about. Courtesy of the Browns. And it ain't gonna be quick."

(Beaver immediately stops smiling. Cassidy rolls her eyes and sits down across from Wally and Lance.)

Lightning Lance Brown:

(softly, almost pleading)

"Mom... are you clean? Are you off the drugs? You promised me."

(Cassidy shifts uncomfortably, biting her lip. She tries to laugh it off.)

Cassidy:

"Course, baby. I'm clean. I'm healthier than I've ever been!"

(Beaver leans in drunkenly.)

Beaver:

"Yeah, she only drinks now, bro. Just malt liquor, none of that heavy stuff."

(Wally slams his fist into the coffee table, causing Beaver to jump and Cassidy to flinch.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

"Only drinks now? You call that clean?!"

Lightning Lance Brown:

(desperately)

"Mom, please! I need you to try! For me. For us. You can be better than this. You were better than this!"

(Cassidy's face crumples for a second, genuine emotion flashing across it. She quickly wipes her eyes and pretends to fix her hair.)

Cassidy:

(muttering)

"Y'all don't know what it's like... being left behind while Wally ran around with his 'Circle of Tyrants' and his gold belts. I had nothing."

Wonderful Wally Brown:

(coldly)

"You had your son. That should've been enough."

(The silence in the room is suffocating. Wally leans forward, his voice low and dangerous.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

"Cassidy, I ain't no angel. Never have been, never will be. I don't give second chances easy. But Lance? He deserves better. He deserves a mom who ain't passin' out at trailer parks and draggin' scum like Beaver 'round like a puppy dog. So here's your shot. You get clean. You get right. You fix yourself. Or I swear to God..."

(Wally glares daggers at Beaver.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

"Next time I see you two together, Beaver's leavin' on a stretcher and you're watchin' from the curb."

(Beaver starts sweating bullets. Cassidy sniffles and wipes her nose on her sleeve.)

Lightning Lance Brown:

(choking up slightly)

"Mom... I just want us to be a family. Even if it's messed up. Even if it's not perfect. I just want to know you're trying."

(Cassidy stares at her son—the boy she dragged into GRL years ago thinking she could control him—and for a moment, you can see the flicker of regret.)

Cassidy:

(whispering)

"I'll try, baby. I'll try."

(The camera zooms out, catching the whole sad scene: Wally looking furious but restrained, Lance looking hopeful but scared, Cassidy looking broken but maybe, just maybe, salvageable. Beaver... just looking terrified.)

Wonderful Wally Brown:

(gritting his teeth)

"This ain't gonna be easy, Cassidy. But it's your only chance. Don't screw it up."

(The screen fades to black with the sound of Wally's knuckles cracking and Lance putting a hesitant, hopeful hand on his mom's arm.)
